

Dear Parents,

The observance of Remembrance Day at our school this year was a suitably poignant and solemn affair, bringing together the entire school community in the spirit of reflection and gratitude. The children were well prepared by teachers ahead of the event and they responded with grace as a collective hush fell upon us, signifying the beginning of a ceremony that has transcended generations. At the heart of this commemoration were our dedicated art ambassadors, who meticulously crafted and laid a wreath that served as a symbol of our remembrance.

The performing arts ambassadors played a crucial role in channelling the emotional resonance of the occasion with their reading of "In Flanders Fields". The words echoed through the playground, carrying the essence of remembrance and ensuring that the stories of those who gave their all for peace were etched into our collective consciousness. The haunting notes of the Bugle player, signalling the "Last Post", created a moment of profound silence that enveloped the entire school in a shared sense of reverence and appreciation.

During this sombre gathering, we extended our thoughts beyond the historical narratives of wars long past to acknowledge the harsh realities of the present, and the ongoing conflicts that affect lives around the world today. The observance became a bridge connecting our shared history with the contemporary struggles for peace, reminding us that the ideals for which many fought and died are still relevant and vital in the present moment. In this act of remembrance, our school community stood together, a living testament to the enduring values of empathy, compassion, and a commitment to a more peaceful world.

Warm regards,

Sian
